

An Old Resident.

The Dispatch has received a letter from another old resident who says he remembers to have attended a fair, and he is sure it was a state fair, on the site of the present Washington park, which he says was then known as Stewart's Grove, and by other dates that he can definitely fix, he knows it was prior to 1865.

We have no records as to the places in Columbus where the state fairs held here were staged other than those given, but it is quite possible that one of them at least was located on the Washington park site.

The Editor of The Dispatch.
